A Time for Family & Friends to be Together at the Inn at Aberdeen, Ltd.

With the loss of a loved one,
there is a need for family and
friends to be together:

to provide strength
to share memories
to plan for the future.

Over the years, the Inn has been a respite for the families and close friends of loved ones as they find a need to be together to gather strength, share memories and plan for the future.

At the time of death, the Inn has served as a place for friends and family to gather to enjoy their company in a private setting away from the public as is common in a typical hotel or restaurant. Those needing overnight accommodations will have a home and those more local can join them for meals. Whether you need a few rooms or wish to rent the entire Inn for even more privacy—we will try to create your special time and meet your every need.

Some families are so dispersed throughout the country or even the world, with varying time schedules and commitments, that they choose to gather with their loved one prior to his or her death. The Inn serves as a haven for family to come together in a private setting, free of outsiders, and spend quiet time and family time with memories and meals together as everyone relives happy moments. The loved one who may be in a hospice or similar location frequently can join the family and friends in the Inn's setting. When specialized transportation is required—the Inn can assist with arrangements. Our chefs can work with you to plan meal functions in addition to the breakfast that is included with each overnight stay. Some families return to the Inn in years to come to relive the time and the warm memories.

So, what do you need to do ?

- Select your dates and determine if you need to only gather in the Conference Room or if you will need overnight lodging.

- Review the packet and feel free to schedule more time with an Innkeeper who can tell you from experience what works wonderfully.
- Write out your guest list and count heads.
- Select your menu. Any special diet needs ?
- Let us know how we can help you further.
